Letter from Our Founder

Dear Valued Customer,

When I founded KORIN in 1982, I never would have dreamed that the Japanese word umami would become a globally understood culinary term. In 2013 washoku, traditional Japanese cuisine was recognized by the United Nations and was added to the UNESCO cultural heritage list, making it the second national cuisine to receive this honor. I am overwhelmed with joy to have witnessed the amazing cultural exchange in the culinary world over the last 43 years.

My goal in the hospitality industry has always been to find hidden or forgotten traditional products and introduce them to the Western culinary world. To inspire something completely new – the spirit of innovation is what drives us here at KORIN.

Many Japanese tableware and kitchenware pieces have deep rooted histories and traditional uses that some Japanese chefs have a difficult time thinking beyond the original purpose. Nowadays, chefs all over the world are utilizing Japanese tableware and kitchenware with completely different uses than their intended purpose.

The craft makers who put their hearts into their products are thrilled to see chefs all over the world cross traditional uses and transform to suit their individual style. Each time a classic piece is used in an unconventional way, it is revived.

When visiting restaurants I am sometimes lucky enough to be invited to see the kitchen and it is a true joy to witness chefs prepare and plate dishes for their guests. Am forever impressed to see how creative our customers are with our catalog of products. Seeing such creativity in action is one of the greatest joys of my job and motivates us here at KORIN.

Our new KORIN Catalog has expanded to include both kitchenware & tableware products, showcasing our newest selections. I hope that the thoughtfulness behind each product we carry helps chefs and hospitality professionals express their passion for cooking and continues to inspire.

With admiration and warmth,

Sharpening Stones

Sharpening Stones must be used in order to sharpen a knife to its fullest potential. The process of sharpening a knife is similar to sanding wood. Sharpening Stones grinds away material to shape and polish the edge to its sharpest.

A medium and fine grit stone are both needed to effectively sharpen both traditional Japanese and Western style knives.

Choosing Whetstones

Before the availability of sythetic materials, people in Japan sharpened knives on natural sharpening stones that were hand quarried, cut and polished. Nowadays, a wide large variety of affordable synthetic sharpening stones has become an attractive alternative. When choosing a sharpening stone, it is important to consider your skills as a sharpener, the material of the knife, and its purpose.
